

Case Study: Braidwood Trust School for the Deaf

Money Smart is a financial education programme aimed at 11-25 year olds who are Deaf or sight impaired. It aims to build financial capability and improve access to services, focusing on public and personal finance.

Topics include everything from budgeting and banking to fraud and spending.

"I'm a spender! I spend lots on games. This taught me the importance of saving and what to save for.

Minimum wages showed me how I can earn and that pay depends on the job. In the future we'll have to do it all ourselves so I can use this knowledge to help my bank account

The Money Mechanics staff were really friendly and able to engage with sign language, so if we had difficulties they'd help us understand."
